Thus, this genetic "accident" in a Silurian fish enabled the random generator of the adaptive immune system to develop. This "invention" conferred a tremendous selective advantage in fighting off infective threats, so that the offspring of this fish pushed all other then-existing vertebrates into extinction, with exception of some lamprey and hagfish.

The apoptosome is a large quaternary protein structure formed in the process of apoptosis. Its formation is triggered by the release of cytochrome c from the mitochondria in response to an internal (intrinsic) or external (extrinsic) cell death stimulus. Stimuli can vary from DNA damage and viral infection to developmental cues such as those leading to the degradation of a tadpole's tail.

The retina is the innermost, light-sensitive layer, or "coat", of shell tissue of the eye of most vertebrates and some molluscs. The optics of the eye create a focused two-dimensional image of the visual world on the retina, which translates that image into electrical neural impulses to the brain to create visual perception, the retina serving much the same function as film or a CCD in a camera.

Models of the Universe are described and classified into three major categories: Historic, Expanding, and Cellular. It is shown that all expanding universe models violate the cosmic edge and containment principle. The multi-millennium conflict between the two major world views --the changing dynamic universe and the unchanging stable universe-- is highlighted.

Drug combinations are increasingly used in the treatment of many conditions and diseases including tuberculosis and cancer [1, 2]. The interaction between two drugs is synergistic if the joint effect of the drugs is stronger than an additive expectation and is antagonistic if it is weaker [3, 4] (). Suppression is an extreme kind of antagonism in which one drug alleviates the effect of the other ().
