Metadata is "data [information] that provides information about other data". Many distinct types of metadata exist, among these descriptive metadata, structural metadata, administrative metadata, reference metadata and statistical metadata. Descriptive metadata describes a resource for purposes such as discovery and identification.

Metadata is information about information: more precisely, it's structured information about resources. It can be as simple as an author's name or as complex as a geographic code or a controlled-vocabulary subject heading. Library catalogs are remote meta data, as are book reviews, indexes to art collections and summaries. Some document formats allow metadata to be incorporated into documents ...
